ATTORNEY PLANS TO FILE DOZENS OF REFUND LAWSUITS AGAINST ULTRA MIAMI

3/26/21

Consumer rights lawyer Marcus Wolf Corwin is changing his strategy against the dance fest promoters refusing to give fans their money back.

A Boca Raton attorney is trying a new tactic to induce the promoters behind Ultra Music Festival to refund fans now that the South Florida festival has been postponed twice due to COVID-19.

Attorney Marcus Wolf Corwin is a former litigator-turned-consumer rights lawyer who filed a 2020 class action lawsuit against Event Entertainment Group, the promotion company behind the long-running dance festival that was scheduled to take place in Bayfront Park in Miami in 2020.

When the case was sent to arbitration -- and then postponed a second time without refunds -- Corwin decided to try a new tactic, filing arbitration claims against Event Entertainment Group for every fan wanting a refund as well as a small claims case in Miami-Dade County Court. Corwin has filed on behalf of three clients already and has a dozen more in the pipeline for next week.
